

CITIZENS ARREST LAWS FOR D.C. FOR THOSE BRINGING ZIP TIES.

For citizen's arrest you can do so if someone is committing a felony.

Also, for Assault, Malicious burning, destruction or injury of another's property, or Unlawful entry. having video would be a good idea, as well as loudly announcing it and calling for police.

You're supposed to hand them over to police "without unreasonable delay". It does not specify what constitutes an unreasonable delay though.

BTW: a nice sturdy reusable shopping bag with a can or two of chili and some canned fruit makes a great weapon. And also a good lunch. Forks are useful things as well, especially strong ones. I suggest a dark colored bag so as not to show blood. I prefer using black socks for this myself, easier to stuff in a pocket or throw away as needed.

practice using flag poles as staffs. Sturdy flag poles are good.

▼ Serious question: If you conduct a citizen's arrest, zip tie someone, notify the police and all else is as it should be, are you, in any way obligated to ensure the safety of the arrested person until the police arrive?

I mean what if someone was out jogging and you zip tied him and arrested him then someone else, came along and forced a bag of fentanyl down the person's throat then knelt on his neck until he overdosed, could you get in trouble for that?

Asking for a friend.

First paragraph = serious Second paragraph = perhaps an unsuccessful and poorly timed attempt at dark humor to add a little much needed levity in these difficult times.

▼ NO idea. That is why I highly recommend video for everything. Head cam video would be a good v keep hands free. Hubby citizen arrested someone once long ago. he stood over the dude and just yelling "this is a citizen's arrest, please call law enforcement". But it wasn't in DC and not at a protest, just a mugger. Back before everyone in the universe had a phone carrying drugs in their mouth, and you wouldn't know with a mask in the way...just sayin.

Some of us are short females, so need a little help beating the shit out of males. Even Pantifa males.

SKILLETS! Ah, memories. Skillets work very well in many domestic situations. Especially the smaller cast iron ones. But then again, so do Hoover vacuums (though I never bought one of those to a protest).

Lionesses are indeed savage in packs. And we have a damned good excuse to carry purses filled with odd things. Now that I have osteoporosis and already had one pelvic fracture, I tend to be more careful than I was when I was young.

True, egg breakage is an integral part of the fine art of omelet making.

This post is a psy op.

▼ The Washington Post is literally sharing articles about how we're planning to storm the capitol and hurt senators using zip ties.
